FEDERALS CLAIM VICTORY

BATTLE IN MEXICO RESULTS IN ROUT FOR REBELS—FLEEING TOWARDS TEXAS.

Piedras Negras, Mexico, Sept. 28.—Reports from Satinas and Barroteran indicate that the Constitutional army has met defeat and is in full retreat toward the border with 1,600 Federals hanging on its flanks.

Americans, who were last week ordered to leave the disturbed district, arrived from the front today and asserted that the great mining properties at Menor, Aguajita, Rosita and, possibly, Eperanza, as well as the town of Parreteran, have been destroyed to prevent their capture by the invading Federals.

At least 8,000 refugees from the disturbed district are reported fleeing toward Piedras Negras, with the intention of crossing the border into Texas.

Heavy loss of life is reported in the two days' fighting, which began yesterday below Aura, when Constitutionalists massed for a desperate attempt to check the long-expected Federal invasion under Gen. Maass of Coahuila, the Constitutionalist stronghold. The Federals moved north today passing west of Aura, along the line of the destroyed Mexican National Railway, gradually forcing the Constitutionalists back, under heavy artillery fire.

At Barroteran the Constitutionalists endeavored to make a stand, but Gen. Pablo Gonzalez decided it useless to risk his men until reinforcements arrived. All property which might have been used by the federals was blown up or burned, much of it owned by foreigners.

TARIFF LEGISLATION ALMOST COMPLETED

Washington, Sept. 28.—Both houses of congress will meet tomorrow with prospect of an early completion of the Democratic tariff bill, although the conference report probably will not be taken up in the house before Tuesday and later in the senate. Instructions have gone out to absent members of both houses to be on hand early in the week for the final stages of tariff revision.

Democratic leaders hope that the bill will be signed by the president before the present week is ended.

With the president's signature, the first Democratic tariff bill since Cleveland's Administration will become law, and a complete revision of tariff rates and of the taxing system will become operative. The struggles in the conference committee practically are ended except for the cotton futures tax question.

Tomorrow the conference report will be sent first to the full conference committee, the Republican members of which thus far have not seen it or helped in its preparation.

It then will be reported to the House by Chairman Underwood of the House conferees, probably Monday afternoon. The present plan is to have it lie over until Tuesday before action is demanded. The House will agree to the report, but recommend an amendment in the form of the so-called Smith-Lever cotton futures tax plan. The document then will go to the Senate.

The senate will approve the completed conference report and agree to the House amendment or demand a new conference. The Senate Democrats either will have to accept the house cotton futures plan or else go counter to the expressed desire of President Wilson and bring about the defeat of the whole cotton future tax plan for the present session of congress.

To Probe Tim Sullivan's Death.
New York, Sept. 29.—A large number of witnesses have been summoned to testify at the inquest into the death of Representative Timothy D. Sullivan, known throughout the city as "Big Tim" which was begun by Coroner Healy today. Mr. Sullivan had been suffering for about a year with some mental disease which made him mentally irresponsible and after having been kept in a sanatorium for some time his brother, with an attendant, took the patient to Europe in the hope that the trip would benefit his condition. After their return this summer, Mr. Sullivan seemed to be somewhat improved, but one day he disappeared under peculiar circumstances and nothing was seen or heard of him in spite of the most thorough search, until his mangled body was found at a railroad crossing in the Bronx borough. Persistent rumors that "Big Tim" had been foully dealt with and that after he had been murdered his body had been placed upon the railroad track, induced District Attorney Whitman to start an investigation and it was decided to hold an inquest.

PONTOTOC COUNT STANDS FOURTH IN COTTON GINNED

According to the government report of cotton ginned prior to Sept. 1, the entire state of Oklahoma had turned out 5,106 bales as against 323 bales at the same date in 1912.

Of the counties Hughes leads with 533 bales, Pottawatomie follows with 402, Garvin comes third with 363 and Pontotoc holds fourth place with 318.

stitutionalists and a number of Federal prisoners executed when it was learned the Federals had occupied Barroteran. Tonight the retreating Constitutionalists halted at Sabinas, reorganizing for a determined assault on the federals tomorrow, with the assistance of 1,000 cavalry reported en route from Matamoros to join them.

Special trains bearing the Constitutionalists wounded are expected here tonight.

The Constitutionalist advisory board asserts it had contemplated the evacuation of the captured territory for some time, as troops could be used to better advantage elsewhere. Tomorrow the board is expected to report to the American Consul here the intended destruction of property of alleged Huerta sympathizers, and a protest is being prepared by foreign residents against injury to their interests.

Recall Movement in Guthrie.
Guthrie, Ok., Sept. 28.—A recall movement has been started by a satisfied with the official conduct of Mayor Nessley and Commissioner Carter of the Department of Safety. A public meeting decided that "Guthrie needs a more progressive city government," and they selected Mike Cassidy, a contractor, as their candidate for Mayor, and Henry H. Reynolds, a real estate dealer, for Commissioner of Public Safety.

Former Bankers on Trial.
Columbus, O., Sept. 29.—The case against Elmer E. Galbreath and Charles H. Davis, former presidents of the Second National Bank of Cincinnati, who were indicted on 28 counts in connection with the financial troubles of that bank, was called for trial today before Judge Sater in the United States District Court. A venire of thirty jurors was drawn from which the jury will be selected.

Entered at the Post Office at Ada, Oklahoma, as second class matter

The Bull Moose leaders declare they will put out a candidate in every congressional district next year. Good news for the Democrats in close states

It is announced that Secretary Bryan and Dr. Cook, of North Pole fame, are to lecture on the same chautauqua circuit next summer. However, the management is careful to explain that it is no reflection on the doctor.

Evidently the raising of peanuts as a money crop has passed the experimental stage in Stephens county. A peanut carnival is to be pulled off at Duncan and the Duncan Eagle is preparing to issue a peanut edition.

Having missed seven silver dollars at the San Francisco mint Uncle Sam now orders the entire stack of over $61,000,000 counted. Before it is ended somebody is likely to wear stripes for four uncle never sleeps when it comes to running down anybody who has the nerve to tamper with his property.

That the Republicans realize that there is no chance for them in Oklahoma next year is evidenced by the shooting of a plan for a fusion ticket by the Tulsa World. No one ever heard of a republican paper talking about a "non-partisan" ticket as long as there was a shadow of a chance for a straight ticket.

Lieutenant Governor Will H. Mayes of Texas has announced his candidacy for governor of that state. Mr. Mayes is one of the most popular newspaper men of Texas and if the boys rally to him they did when he made the race for the present office his election is assured. We hope they will, for having known him for nearly thirty years, you make take it from us, boys, that he is there with the goods when it comes to qualifications.

Rooms for rent. Furnace heat. Mrs. R. A. Mason, 122 W. 16th. 149-5td

Here is the way the experts have figured it out for boys who attend school: "A boy who won't go through the public school has no chance to make more than $10 a week when a man, and many will not make that much. The boy who goes through the high school has a chance to make $15 to $20 a week and the boy who goes through college drops in the $35 to $50 and even $100 a week class. The more a boy puts in his mind the more cash he can draw when at work.—Salisbury Star-Gazette.

3,000 TEACHERS EXPECTED AT STATE MEETING

Tulsa, Ok., Sept. 29.—Dr. Stratton Brooks of the Oklahoma university and president of the Oklahoma Teachers' association, has given assurance to City Superintendent of Schools E. B. Oberholtzer that he will make a special effort to have the school boards in every city and town in the state pay all teachers double their regular salary as an inducement to attend the state teachers' meet at Tulsa this year.

Supt. Oberholtzer said yesterday that one plan, which will likely be successfully carried out, will assure at least 3,000 teachers in Tulsa the three days of the meet, which will be held during the Christmas holidays, probably December 29, 30 and 31.

Supt. Oberholtzer, Principal F. J. Katz and Prof. George MacCurdy have been appointed as a committee by the executive committee of the teachers' association to determine the hotel accommodations that will be afforded here. The committee called on the leading hotels and secured assurances from them that every possible convenience would be afforded and that no advance in rates would be made. Although the program is not yet completed those on the program committee state that one of the best and most entertaining programs that has ever been given a like meeting will be arranged soon for the Tulsa meet. During the three days' session here headquarters will be maintained at Hotel Tulsa.

Cotton continues to climb slowly in price. Some has sold on the streets of Ada today at 14.25, which is about 3c better than at this time a year ago.

Mrs. P. A. Norris, who has been seriously ill for several days past, is reported some better today.

Miss Auda Stockton of Fort Worth, a talented young lady who has been engaged as pianist at the Majestic, arrived this morning.

This evening the De Sota will present three excellent pictures, which are of a kind that will impress one as being something different from the usual run. "A Perilous Ride" features Lamar Johnston and Francella Billington. "Freney's Social Experiment" is a sure enough scream. "The Gambler's Pal" is the last of the three.

This evening the Majestic will present a thrilling two-reel sensation entitled: "A Wild Ride." In this Bessie Eytan, the world's most daring actress is the star and her wild ride on the back of an ostrich from peril to safety is something wonderful. Then comes a jolly comedy featuring John Bunney and Flora Finch.

The bad weather of last week interfered greatly with the Airdome, but this evening it will again be open for business at the same old stand and with a program of three reels that will keep up the interest in any sort of crowd. The three are "Sailing Under False Colors," "The Flower Girl and the Counterfeiters," and "The Little Skipper." Coming soon: "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Secured Gulls of Utah

Nearly forty years ago, when the crops of other Western States and Territories were destroyed by grasshoppers, those of Utah were saved by the advent of large flocks of gulls. They came from no one knew where, and settled like so many sparrows all over the land, devouring almost without ceasing the foe that threatened the food of the people.

The Mormons, holding these gulls to be birds of God, sent to his chosen people to protect their crops, made it a penal offense to shoot them. The effect of this law was to secure the continued usefulness of the gulls and to change their manners from the wildness of an unapproachable sea bird, soaring and diving, to the tameness of the barnyard fowl.

So tame did they become that they habitually followed the plow like a flock of chickens, rising almost under the feet of the indifferent horses and settling down at once in the furrow behind, seeking out and eating greedily all the worms and grubs, larvae and mice and moles that the plow had disturbed in its passage.

Great numbers of the descendants of the Mormons' gulls still exist in Utah. They spend much of their time on an island in the Great Salt Lake and turn their attention to the fish that are brought down by the freshwater streams into the lake. These are at once strangled by the lake's excess of salt, and their bodies washed upon the shore. If the animal deposit were left for the fierce sun to dispose of the heat of the human residents would grievously suffer. The gulls continue their beneficial service to the people by doing the scavenger work of buzzards and carrion crows.—New York Press.

HEAD CONSUL SWANK ON WOODCRAFT

Owing to the inclement weather that had prevailed for a week and the condition of the road to the cemetery, the unveiling of the W.O.W. monuments at Rosedale cemetery Sunday was converted into a memorial service for the five deceased sovereigns, L. D. Keirsey, Clay Copeland, W. T. Admire, C. H. Morton and D. Rushing.

The uniform rank team of the Ada camp, together with several from Francis and Steedman, led the procession to the Presbyterian church, where Judge Tom D. McKeown delivered a short and touching eulogy on the deceased Woodmen and Head Consul F. B. Swank delivered a splendid address on Woodcraft and what it stands for the protection of the home, it being the cardinal principle of the Woodmen to provide for the dependent ones so that the home need not be broken up if it should be visited by death.

The family is thus being kept together is made more useful, instead of becoming a burden, and the children permitted to grow into independent and valuable citizens. He dwelt at some length on the duty every man owes his dependent ones and the desirability of insurance carried with the W.O.W. He told of the marvelous growth of the order and of the millions it now distributes every year, and also of the provision that every grave be marked with a splendid monument. The last named feature he explained originated with Sovereign Commander Root as he passed through a cemetery and saw so many unmarked graves and the departed ones utterly forgotten. He resolved that no Woodman should sleep in an unmarked grave.

Judge Swank is a man of strong character and ability and his earnest appeal made a strong impression on his hearers. He is plainly one of the rising men of Oklahoma.

DAN SCRIBNER SAVES LIFE OF PEN GUARD

Dan Scribner, serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary at McAlester for murder, is the hero of that institution at present. He saved the life of John Childers, a guard.

During the bathing hour a dispute arose between two negro convicts. One of them, "Sunny" Cole, a black giant was found to have a knife, with which he made an assault on the other negro. Guard Childers grabbed the arm of Cole, but was not able to hold him. The latter, wrenching loose, made a desperate drive with the knife at the guard's stomach. The knife had almost reached him when Scribner grabbed a large iron poker and felled the giant negro, rendering him unconscious with a blow that would have crushed an ordinary skull.—Wichita Eagle.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ENGAGES LYCEUM COURSE

The Epworth League has undertaken a lyceum course for the coming winter, the first number of the five attractions to be given October 27 by the Cathedral Choir. Other attractions will be given from time to time, the course closing with the Cadet Boys Quartet. Ralph Perlett, who has al-

JAS. R. HOUNSHELL GETS WELL EARNED PROMOTION

Jas. R. Hounshell, who for the past five years has held the position of mailing clerk in the Ada postoffice, has been transferred to the railway service and will be given the run on the Santa Fe from Fort Worth to Oklahoma City.

It is seldom that a new clerk is given a regular run at the start, and still more unusual for him to be given as good a run at the start as the one to which Jim has been appointed.
It is all due to the high marks he has made in the civil service examinations he has taken from time to time.
He left this morning for Fort Worth to report for duty. He and his wife will live at Oklahoma City.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS WILL MEET AT GUTHRIE

Guthrie, Ok., Sept. 29.—The fall convocation of the Consistory of the Valley of Guthrie, Orient of Oklahoma, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry, has been called for the week of Oct. 6. It will be the third meeting held this year, and the present indications are that the fall class in the degrees will be larger even than either of the former two. This is designed as the reunion of all the former classes combined with the work of assisting in the duty of "leading farther into the light of Scottish Freemasonry the host of our brethren of the Ancient Craft Degrees."

The visitors will be provided with meals in the Egyptian banqueting room of the temple, so that they may devote all their time to the work in the degrees during the day and evening. The entire property equipment, including the electrical system, is complete. The special music for this convocation will be under the direction of Edwin Valle McIntyre, who will preside at the organ. He will be assisted by a male chorus and a mixed chorus of thirty voices.

LITTLE DAUGHTER OF J. N. POST DEAD

Friday evening at 10 o'clock, Flora Lillian, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Post, of 300 West 9th street, died of congestion of the brain. The funeral and interment took place Sunday afternoon at Rosedale cemetery.

The loss of their child is a severe blow to the parents, for the little one was the light of the home. They have the sincere sympathy of a host of friends who feel deeply for the mourning ones.

"You are all right, Scarlett?"
"Yes, . . . all right. What time is it?"
I heard the click of his hunting-cases. "Eleven o'clock."
"What day?"
"Saturday."
"When was I hurt? Many days ago—many weeks?"
"You were hurt at half-past three this afternoon."
I turned on the white pillow. "Where is this bed? Where is this room?"
"Shall I tell you?"
I was silent, struggling with memory.
"Tell me," I said, "whose bed is this?"
"It is here."
The candle-flame glimmered before my wide-open eyes once more, and—
"Oh, you are all right," he muttered, then leaned heavily against the bedside, dropping his arms on the coverlet.
That is all I remember that night, all I remember clearly, though it seems to me that once I heard drums beating in the distance; and perhaps I did.
Dawn was breaking when I awoke, dazed, partly dressed, lay beside me, sleeping heavily. "Idiot, get up!" I cried, hitting him feebly.
He was very angry when he found out why I had awakened him; perhaps the sight of my bandaged head reminded him from violence.
He stumbled to the floor, bathed, grumbling all the while, and then, to my surprise, walked over to a flat trunk which stood under the window and which I recognized as mine.
"I'll borrow some underwear," he remarked viciously.
"What's my trunk doing here?" I demanded.
"Madame de Vassart had them bring it."
"Had who bring it?"
"Horn and McCadger—before they left."
"Before they left? Have they gone?"
"I forgot," he said, soberly. "Of course you don't know that the circus has gone."
"Gone!" I echoed, astonished.
"Gone to Lorient. Buckhurst is in town again with a raft of picturesque ruffians," he said. "They marched in last night, drums beating, colors unfurled—the red rag, you know—and the first thing they did was to order Byram to decamp."
"Byram's people, elephant and all, struck the road a little after three o'clock this morning, in good order, not a tent-peg nor a frying-pan missing. They ought to be in Lorient by early afternoon."
"Gone!" I repeated, blankly.
I lay looking at him, striving to realize the change that had occurred in so brief a time—trying to understand the abrupt severing of ties and conditions to which, already, I had become accustomed—perhaps attached.
"They all sent their love to you," he said. "They knew you were out of danger—I told them there was no fracture, only a slight concussion. Byram came to look at you; he brought your back salary—all of it. I've got it."
After a moment I said: "Has Jacques gone with them?"
"Yes. They sail today from Lorient. The governor made money yesterday—enough to start again. Poor Byram! He's frantic to get back to America; and, oh, Scarlett, how that good old man can swear!"
"Speed, did you say that little Jacques went with Byram?"
"Yes," he said.
I was silent.
"Yes," he repeated, "she went, taking her pet cat in her arms. She would go; the life has fascinated her. I begged her not to—I felt I was betraying Byram, too, but what could I do? I tell you, Scarlett, I wish I had never seen her, never persuaded her to try that foolish dive. She'll miss some day—like the other one."
He walked to the window and stared moodily at the sea.
"Meanwhile," I said, quietly, "I am going to get up."
He gave me a look which I interpreted as, "Get up and be damned!" complied in part.

CHAPTER XIX.

Treasure Garden.

About nine o'clock we were summoned by a Breton maid to the pretty breakfast room below, and I was ashamed to go with my shabby clothes, bandaged head, and face the color of clay.

The young countess was not present; Sylvia Elven offered us a supercilious welcome, and we ate in constrained silence.

"Will the pensive gentleman with nine lives have a little more nourishment to sustain him?" she asked, as the meal drew to an end.

Looking up from my empty plate, I declined politely; and we followed her signal to rise.

She led the way into that small room overlooking the garden where I had been twice received by Madame de Vassart. Here she took leave of us, abandoning us to our own designs. On the wall a cat sat, sunning her sleek flanks. Something about the animal seemed familiar to me, and after a while I made up my mind that this was Ange Pitou, Jacqueline's pet, abandoned by her mistress and now a feline derelict. I watched the cat for a few moments, then sat down on the bench. The inertia which follows recovery from a shock, however light, left me with the lazy acquiescence of a convalescent, willing to let the world drift for an hour or two, contented to relax, apathetic, comfortable.

And then my reverie ended abruptly; a step on the gravel walk brought me to my feet. . . . There she stood, lovely in a fresh morning gown deeply belted with turquoise-shells, her ruddy hair glistening, coiled low on a neck of snow.

For the first time she showed embarrassment in her greeting, scarcely touching my hand, speaking with a new constraint in a voice which grew colder as she hesitated.

"We were frightened; we are so glad that you were not badly hurt. I thought you might find it comfortable here—of course I could not know that you were not seriously injured."

"I think you did the most graciously unselfish thing a woman could do," I said, quickly. "You offered your best; and the man who took it cannot—dare not—express his gratitude."

"We brought you here because we thought it was good for you," she said, reverting to the theme that had at first embarrassed her. "We were perfectly certain that you have always been unfit to take care of yourself. Now we have the proofs."

I leaned on the back of the bench, resting my bandaged forehead on my hand.

"Are you suffering?" she asked.

"Your face is white as my sleeve."

"I feel curiously tired," I said, smiling.

"Then you must have some tea, and I will brew it myself. You shall not object! No—it is useless, because I am determined."

The tea was hot and harmless; I lay thinking while she sat in the sunny window-corner, nibbling biscuit and marmalade, and watching me gravely.

"I suppose," said I, thinking aloud, "that I had better go to England."

"When?" she asked, without raising her head.

"In a day or two. I can find employment there, I think."

"What will you do?"

"Oh, the army—horses—something of that kind. Riding-master, perhaps—perhaps Scotland Yard. If I ever save enough money for the voyage, perhaps you would let me come, once in a while, to pay my respects, madame?"

"Yes, . . . come, if you wish."

She said no more, nor did I. Presently Sylvia appeared with a peasant woman, and the young countess went away, followed by the housekeeper with her keys at her girdle.

I rose and walked to the window; then, nerveless and depressed, I went out into the garden again to smoke a cigar.

The cat had disappeared; I traversed the garden, passed through the side wicket, and found myself on the cliffs. Almost immediately I was aware of a young girl, a child, seated on the rocks, her chin propped on her hands, the sea-wind blowing her curly locks across her cheeks and eyes. A bundle tied in a handkerchief lay beside her; a cat dozed in her lap, its sleek fur stirring in the wind.

"Jacqueline!" I said, gently. "I thought you were to sail from Lorient today?"

The cat stopped purring from her paws; the child ran, mouth open, back-her hair from her eyes with both hands.

"Where is Speed?" she asked, anxiously.

"Did you want to see him, Jacqueline?"

"That is why I returned."

"And you are going to give up the circus forever, Jacqueline?"

"Yes."

"Just because you want to see Speed?"

"Only for that."

She stood rubbing her eyes with her small fists, as though just awakened.

"Come into the garden," I said; "we can talk while you rest."

The young countess was standing at the window as we approached in solemn single file along the path, and when she caught sight of us she opened the door and stepped out on the tiny porch.

"Why, this is our little Jacqueline," she said, quickly. "They have taken your father for the conscription, have they not, my child? And now you are homeless!"

"I think so, madame."

"Then you will stay with me until he returns, won't you, little one?"

"We thank you, and permit ourselves to accept, madame," said Jacqueline. "We are very glad because we are quite hungry, and we have thorns from the gorse in our feet."

She broke off with a joyous little cry: "There is Speed!" And Speed, entering the garden hurriedly, stopped short in his tracks.

The child ran to him and threw both arms around his neck. "Oh, Speed! Speed!" she stammered, over and over again. "I was too lonely; I will do what you wish; I will be instructed in the graces of education—truly I will. I am glad to come back—and I am so tired, Speed. I will never go away from you again. . . . Oh, Speed, I am contented! . . . Do you love me?"

"Dear little sweetheart," he said, huskily, trying to steady his voice. "There! Madame the countess is waiting. All will be well now." He turned, smiling, toward the young countess, and lifted his hat, then stepped back and fixed me with a blank look of dismay, which said perfectly plainly that he had unpleasant news to communicate. The countess, I think, saw that look, too, for she gave me an almost imperceptible nod and took Jacqueline's hand in hers.

"If there are thorns in your feet we must find them," she said, sweetly. "Will you come, Jacqueline?"

"Yes, madame," said the child, with an adoring smile at Speed, who bent and kissed her upturned face as she passed.

"Well," said I, turning to Speed, "what new devilry is going on in Paradise now?"

"Preparations for train-wrecking, I should say," he replied, bluntly. "They are tinkering with the trestle. Buckhurst's ragamuffins have just seized the railroad station at Rose-Sainte-Anne, where the main line crosses, you know, near the ravine at Lamerin."

"That's all I have to report, except that your friend, Robert the Lizard, is out yonder fast on his belly under a gorse bush, and he wants to see you."

"The Lizard!" I exclaimed. "Come on, Speed. Where is he?"

"Yonder, clothed in somebody's line uniform. He's one of them. Scarlett, do you trust him? He has a rifle."

"Yes, yes," I said, impatiently. "Come on, man! It's all right; the fellow is watching Buckhurst for me."

I greeted the poacher frankly, offering my hand; he took it, then his hand fell away and he touched his cap.

"I have done what you wanted," he said, sullenly. "I have the company's rolls—here they are." He dragged from his baggy trousers pockets a mass of filthy papers, closely covered with smeared writing. "Here is the money, too," he said, fishing in the other pocket; and, to my astonishment, he produced a flattened, soiled mass of bank notes. "Count it," he added, calmly.

"What money is that?" I asked, taking it reluctantly.

"Didn't you warn me to get that box—the steel box that Tric-Trac sat down on when he saw me?"

"Is that money from the box?" I exclaimed.

"Yes, m'sieu. I could not bring the box, and there had been enough blood shed over it already. Besides, when Buckhurst broke it open there was only a bit of iron for the scrap heap left."

I touched Speed's arm to call his attention; the poacher shrugged his shoulders and continued: "Tric-Trac made no ceremony with me; he told me that he and Buckhurst had settled this Doctor Delmont, and the other—the professor—Tavernier."

"Murdered them?" muttered Speed.

"Dame!—the coup du Pere Francois is murder, I suppose."

Speed turned to me. "That's the argot for strangling," he said, grimly.

"Go on," I motioned to the poacher.

"How did you get the money?"

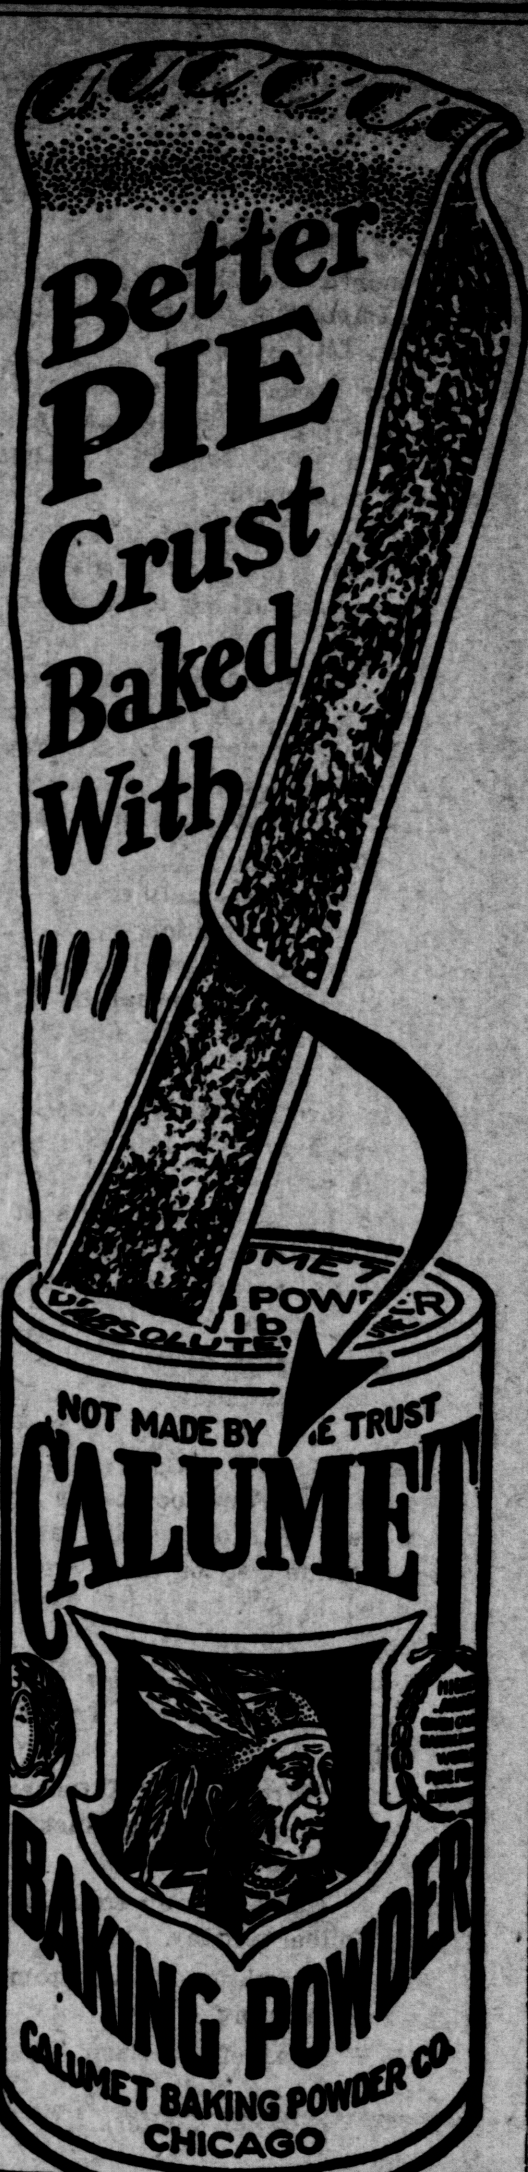

"Oh, poor ca—in my turn I turned sennour," he replied, with a savage smile.

A sennour, in thieves' slang, is a creature of the footpad type who, tripping his victim flat, seizes him by the shoulders and beats his head against the pavement until he renders him unconscious—if he doesn't kill him.

I asked the poacher why Buckhurst had come to Paradise, and why his handiwork had seized the railroad at Rose-Sainte-Anne.

"Ah," cried the Lizard, with a fore-closed leer, "that is the horned under the Impet's tent! And I have uncovered it—I, Robert Garanne, bon sang de Jumi! Listen, monsieur! We are to wreck the train for Speed tonight. Do you comprehend?"

"Where?" I asked, calmly.

BLOODY BATTLE WITH DRUG CRAZED NEGROES

Harriston, Miss., Sept. 28.—Two drug-crazed negroes, brothers, ran amuck here early Sunday and before they were killed and the attendant disorder quelled, three white men, four negro men and a negro woman were shot to death and five white persons and several negroes wounded. A serious clash between the races was prevented by the arrival of a company of militia from Natchez aboard a special train.

The trouble started about 2 o'clock Sunday morning and continued intermittently until 10 o'clock, when Walter Jones, the elder of the two negro youths, who started the firing, was lynched just after the soldiers arrived. His brother, Will, had been shot by citizens earlier in the day. Soon after, people who had barricaded themselves in their homes, began to cautiously emerge from their hiding places and by noon the town was quiet. No further disorder is anticipated.

The dead:
Sheriff G. B. Hammett of Jefferson county, shot while leading a posse to where the negroes were in hiding.
Former Constable Frank Kneistley, shot at his home after being called to a door.
Claude Freeman, white, of Fayette, shot at railway station while waiting a train.

Teller Warren, negro
Johanna Aiken, negress.
Tom Weeks, negro.
Jesse Thompson, negro.
Thead Grayson, negro, killed during promiscuous shooting.
Walter and Will Jones, negroes, lynched.

Wounded: Orin Gillis, former sheriff, shot in shoulder and may die; A. B. Appleby, conductor of the Yazoo-Mississippi Valley railroad, shot in breast, leg and arm, dangerous; William McCalieb, shot in leg and thigh; William Kneistley, son of Frank, shot in hand; William Dennis, shot in leg; W. C. Bond, shot in leg. Sixteen negroes were wounded but none seriously.

SOUTHERN STATES MAY EXPECT MORE RAIN

Washington, Sept. 28.—Generally fair weather west of the Rockies, but rain and unsettled weather in the West, South and Central West, and somewhat cooler weather as a rule were forecast today for the coming week by the Weather Bureau. The predictions are:

"East of the Rockies, conditions will be unsettled early in the week, with rain Monday in the Central Plains States, the great central valleys, the southern portion of the upper lake region and in the South, and quite generally on Tuesday or Wednesday over the eastern and southern portions of the country except over the extreme northern districts. In the Central West and in the Northwest fair weather should prevail after Tuesday until late in the week, when unsettled conditions are indicated. "Indications point to a week of generally fair weather west of the Rocky Mountains except over the far Northwest, where rains are expected early in the week and again after the middle of the week.

"The temperatures will rise early in the week over the Central and Southern districts and probably will fall in a day or two over the Northern districts, but no extremes in either direction are expected. "It will be warmer Monday in the central valleys, the lake region and the East, and probably cooler about the middle of the week in the Northwest. There are no present indications of any unseasonably cold weather during the week."
